Almost, MAINE

For the last two years, Almost, Maine has been the most widely produced play at high schools throughout the country. There are many reasons for this including the flexibility of the cast. The play is written for anywhere between four and nineteen actors. While being a very accessible play, it is also a tremendous challenge and we hope to continue providing productions that enable our students to grow as artists. Almost, Maine also provided a great vehicle for us to offer another opportunity for student directors.

This process has been quite unique for all involved as we rehearsed in scene sections rather than with the entire cast as is traditionally the case. I've been so proud of these young people in their flexibility, commitment, and their willingness to try new things. We've all been touched by these characters and their stories and we hope your heart is warmed as we journey north to Almost, Maine.
