DIRECTOR'S NOTES

Jane Austen's Sense and Sensibility, the endearing story of the Dashwood sisters, was first published in 1810 and continues to touch audiences today. Kate Hamill's clever 2014 adaptation has been a challenge on many levels. Students have risen to the occasion at every turn. Whether it be mastering a British accent or navigating the never-ending rolling set changes, this cast has been a joy to work with from day one!

Bringing great works of literature to life through theatre is always a wonderful adventure. LC's Senior AP Literature students are currently studying Austen's novel and will join us to see how Hamill's adaptation measures up. We hope you enjoy getting to know Austen's beloved characters as much as we have enjoyed bringing them to life.

Sense & Sensibility

TIME & PLACE

Kate Hamill's modern adaptation of this story carries us throughout England from the country to the county to the city. The swift changes in setting, time and place contrast the steady sense of our characters' journeys. Watch for subtle indications of change in time and location through lighting and scenery changes.

Significant locations in our story:

- Norland Park - the Dashwood sisters' family home they must leave after their father's death.
- Barton Park - Sir John and Lady Middleton's home in Devonshire.
- Barton Cottage – Sir John offers the Dashwood's the cottage on his property.
- Cleveland – the Palmer's home providing a temporary stay after the Dashwood's leave England.
